Attention, Bucktails

The twenty-third Annual Reunion of the Regimental Association of the Old "Bucktails," First Rifles, P. R. V. C., will be held at Gettysburg, Pa., on Tuesday, September 29th, 1910, at which time the State Memorial will be dedicated. Headquarters will be opened at the Battle Field Hotel, on Baltimore street, on Monday, Sept. 26th, 1910, where accommodations may be secured at a rate of $2.00 per day, including meals. Both the active and honorary members of the Association, who expect to attend the Reunion, should arrange for quarters in advance, as the crowd promises to be very large. To do so, address, "Mrs. Elsie Braunreuter, Battle Field Hotel, Baltimore Street, Gettysburg, Pa ," as soon as posible. All members of the Association will report at headquarters immediately upon arrival, where they will be furnished with the official badge and duly registered. The annual dues of the Association are now due and payable. The same may be sent to the Treasurer, Hugh M. Irwin, Curwensville, Pa. Acknowledgment will be made in the next publication. The Bucktail insignia will be worn by all members of the Association during the ceremonies. It is desired that all Comrades supply themselves with one before leaving their homes. Members of the Association who have changed their address, or have positive information of the death of a member, notify the secretary at once, in order that the records may be properly corrected. "For the Dedication of the State Memorial, soldiers of Pennsylvania Regiments or other organizations which participated in the Battle of Gettysburg can have free transportation to and from Gettysburg (and the public a rate of 1½ cents per mile each way) from the railroad station in Pennsylvania nearest to the homes of each, tickets to be good, going, from Sept 24th to Sept. 27th, and good, returning, to each original starting point not later than Sept. 30th." "To arrange for railroad tickets for soldiers entitled to free transportation, and to provide seats for them at the dedication, each such soldier is requested to send to the Commission at once his full name and Post Office address, together with the name of the Regiment and Company in which he served, addressed to the GETTYSBURG BATTLEFIELD MEMORIAL COMMISSION, Post Office Box 533 Philadelphia, Pa." And now, Bucktails, we should be present, if we can, at this coming Reunion. Next year many of us will only be "accounted for." Let us utilize the present opportunity then, to get together in greater numbers than ever, and enjoy a Bucktail Reunion on this historic ground, made sacred by the loss of so many of our comrades.

By order of the Governing Committee,
WILLIAM H. RAUCH, Chairman.

Same Receiver.

On Saturday last this town was visited by many lawyers and railroad men, interested in the affairs of the Buffalo & Susquehanna railroad, some of them coming by special train from Buffalo. It seems that the B. & S. Railway Company, which went into the hands of a receiver, last May, was the lessee of the B. & S. Railroad Company, which owned the property. The same receiver, Harry I. Miller, was appointed Saturday, for the last named corporation.—Potter Journal.

Gone to Michigan.

Ben G. Hackett and Michael May, Jr., of this county, both being employed at Sinnamahoning, left on Tuesday for Ishpeming, Mich., where they will be employed at the Pluto Powder Works, located at National Mine P. O. What "big talk" there will be when they meet O'Connor? Of course the PRESS follows them.

Gone to Buffalo.

W. L. Carter, of Rich Valley, went to Buffalo last Friday to enter the automobile business. Will is an energetic and steady gentleman and we feel sure he will meet with success in Buffalo.

The Keystone National base ball team will give a dance at Emporium opera house, Friday evening, Aug. 12th. Price 50c per couple. Good music has been engaged and a good time assured.

WILL ENLARGE WATER SYSTEM

Contract Awarded Tuesday Evening to a Bradford Firm,

The long talked about enlargement of the Emporium Water Company's system was on Tuesday evening contracted for. A number of gentlmen met at the office of the Water Com-Company, in Parsons' Bazaar, when the several bids were opened, Applegate & Son, of Bradford, being the lowest bidders. Their bid was $37,000, for the erection of a reservoir of 3,000,000 gallon capacity, which includes the laying of the pipe to Emporium, the Water Company to furnish the pipe. The contractors have until Jan. 1st, 1911, to complete their work. Work will commence at once. The new reservoir will be located 2¾ miles up Salt Run and it is estimated will cover over nine acres of land.

We all hope this movement may result in the upbuilding of the capacity of supply for Emporium has certainly suffered a scarcity of good pure water.

Public Address and Coming Convention.

Under the auspices of the local W. C. T. U., of this place, a public address from the topic, "The Legislative Side of the Temperance Question," was made by Mrs. Addá Boileau Parsells, of Philadelphia, Pa. A large audience, mostly men, manifested their appreciation of the address, by quietly standing over an hour during the address and then waiting to contribute about eleven dollars to the local W. C. T. U., to assist the ladies in advancing the temperance reform in this place.

Mrs. Parsells was favorably impressed by the courteous manner and attention of her audience, and went away very favorably impressed with the citizens of our town. Many have expressed a desire to have Mrs. Parsells with us again in the near future,

The County Convention of the W. C. T. U., of Cameron county, will be held in the Methodist Church, at Emporium, Aug. 29-30. Mrs Ella George, State President, and Mrs. S. C. Wilson, State Organizer of the W. C. T. U., will be present at the convention. Able speakers will favor the delegates and audiences of the convention with many good parts of a carefully prepared program. Remember the date of the convention. A cordial invitation to all.

MRS. M. E. SCHRINER,
President, W. C. T. U.

Some Fine Peas.

Ye editor was presented with a jar of fine green peas last week, the product of the garden of Mrs. L. A. Chandler, of North Creek. The peas were of the sweetest variety and certainly we appreciated the gift of Mrs. Chandler. We are sorry to state that Mrs. Chandler is not in the best of health, having been under the doctor's care for some time.

Vocalist in Town.

Harry Barnes of Detroit, was guest of his sister, Mrs. George C. Taggart. Mr. Barnes assisted in the choir of Emmanuel Episcopal church last Sunday morning and favored the congregation with a fine solo during the offertory. Mr. Barnes possesses rare vocal ability and sings with much ease. All that had the pleasure of hearing him sing during his visit here were delighted.

Precarious Condition.

In our last issue we noted that our townsman, Mr. Wm. Hackenberg had gone to Buffalo for treatment. His disease proved to be gall-stone. He was operated upon Saturday and we regret is in a very precarious condition. We learn his children were called to Buffalo on Tuesday. While there is life there is hope in his case. This (Thursday) morning, he is reported a little easier.

A Terrible Sufferer.

Mr. Geo. Metzger, Sr , who has been a great sufferer for several months, with that terrible disease, cancer on his face, has been very low for several days. A professional nurse was called yesterday. His death may be looked for at any moment.

Will Enter West Point.

Joe Taggart McNarney, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.P. McNarney, of this place, left for Washington, D. C., on Monday, where he will enter a training academy, preparatory to presenting himself before examining board for admission to West Point Military Academy, having been nominated by Congressman Barclay for the position. The examination takes place some time next January. Joe is a graduate of Emporium High School and a thorough scholar, as well as an exemplary young man. We have not the least fear but he will pass the examination with high honors. It is an honor to the efficiency of Emporium High School that they teach every course required by the West Point examining board and two languages more more than Uncle Sam requires. We firmly believe the young man will reach the ambition of his life and ere many years we may expect him to visit Emporium as Lieut. McNarney. Cameron county has never in its history been favored with an appointment to West Point.

Moved to "Old Tiog"

Mrs. Nancy Lucore and Mrs. Bert C. Bailey, of the Portage, have moved to Wellsboro, Tioga county, where they have purchased a farm, a few miles from that town. Mrs. Lucore, widow of the late Lemuel Lucore, having sold to the Pennsylvania R. R. Company eleven acres of the farm flat for a consideration of $3,000 and being well along in years, she decided to accompany her daughter to Wellsboro, a wise conclusion. Their many friends deplore the departure of this excellent and respected family, who have resided on the Portage all their lives.

Returns to Hospital.

Judge B. W. Green and niece, Miss Alice Montgomery, accompanied Mrs. Green to Philadelphia last evening. Mrs. Green, while improving in health, will resume her former treatment at the Methodist Hospital. Her many friends hope she may return home fully restored. Miss Montgomery will remain with her aunt.

After School Club.

Miss Schultz, of New York City, is introducing the "After School Club" system in Emporium. She is a very pleasant lady and the PRESS enjoyed her social call very much. Since the instruction is especially for younger minds, we directed the lady to call on Miss Mattie M. Collins and Hon. Josiah Howard.

Bell Fish Numerous.

Never in the history of this state were rattlesnakes so plentiful. In some localities berry pickers are afraid to go to the woods. Many monsters have been killed in this county. The dry weather is driving the snakes to streams for water. Be careful.

Our readers should read carefully the Constitutional Amendments published in this issue of the PRESS. Post yourself and vote intelligently when the time arrives.

Mayor Gaynor Better.

Mayor Gaynor, of New York City, was shot on Tuesday, by a discharged city employee, named Jas. J. Gallagher. The Mayor had boarded a steamer to make a trip to Europe, when the crazed man fired, the ball entering back of the Mayor's right ear. A second shot missed him, striking City Commissioner "Big Bill" Edwards in the arm. This Thursday morning the Mayor stands a fairly good chance of recovery, the only danger being blood poisoning.

Birthday Party.

A very pleasant surprise was tendered Mrs. Gilbert Morse at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. R. Fetter, Saturday evening, Aug. 6th, when friends and acquaintances called to offer congratulations to this very worthy and estimable lady in having reached her 78th birthday. Mrs. Morse is well and favorably known, having resided in Cameron county upwards of forty years. A social evening was spent and elegant refreshments served. Those present were:

Ice Cream and Cake Social.

Mrs. Henry W. Graham, wife of our respected tonsorial artist, being desirous of assisting her friends in Bellefonte, where she resided so many years, in their effort to rebuild the A. M. E. Church, recently destroyed by fire, has decided to give an ice cream and cake social at their comfortable home on West Fifth street, Thursday evening, August 18th. We hope our citizens will liberally patronize the good lady and thereby aid her in her good work.

Straw Ride.

A merry bunch of Emporiumites went to the home of Miss Edda Horning, at Howard Siding, last Friday evening on a straw ride. Those present were Misses Eva Burns, Mary Burns, Lena Swartz, Clara Zwald, Clara Weisenfluh, Mary Normanly, Murriel Beattie. Anna Kreitner and Edna Johnson, and Messrs. Robert Leutze, Elmer Piper, Mahlon Remarge, Fred Metzger, Joseph Zimmett, Howard Pepperman, Harry Shearer and Bert Jones. All present had a most enjoyable time.

Base Ball.

The Keystone Nationals scored another victory last Saturday afternoon, when they crossed bats with the team from Port Allegany. The game ended in seven innings with the score of nine to nothing. The game was a little too one-sided to be of much interest, but at the same time speaks well for the home team.

***

The Keystone Nationals were defeated by the Ridgway base ball team at that place yesterday by the score of 4 to 1. Sorry that we have not time to give the tabulated account, boys.

Suffragettes of France Progress.

PARIS, JULY 5.—The subdued way to which French suffragists are conducting their campaign offers a contrast to the manifestations of their English sisters. Both seem however to agree on one point, namely that the only way to attract public attention is to do something out of the ordinary.

England is a serious country, therefore the suffragettes invent every day new methods to remind the masses of the existance of their cause France has the reputation of a somewhat fickle temperament, and the French suffragists work in a serions way. The French method seems so far to have given the best results.

Already a law has been passed granting to woman absolute property in their earnings. A suffrage society has been founded by Mme. Schmahl and neither work nor money is spared to obtain the franchise for women. The Duchess d'Uzes is the vice-president and she gives many brilliant functions for the suffrage cause.

The views on women suffrage of some prominent men have just been published and they seem to be more or less favorable in the woman's cause. Maurice Donnay of the French Academy does not approves of universal suffrage, but "since we call it universal," he said, "it must be general if we are to be logical." The dictionary tells me that universal means general therefore why must half of the population be excluded?

Victor du Bled, the author of "Histoire de la Societe Franchise," is not only a supporter of the women's cause but is a great believer in their abilities. He is convinced that it is only a question of time until women will succeed in eliminating men from politics. In the next volume of his history M.de Bled has promised to deal at length with the movement.

It is the opinion of even the more sanguine partisans of the women politicians that at first they ought to be contented with municipal suffrage, at least until they have acquired enough practice to deal with the more complicated parliamentary questions.

Eugene d'Eichthal opposes a mixed parliamentary representation. He suggests the formation of an assembly of women to take charge of all questions relative to woman's interests.—Philadelphia Press.

The Tariff is made a scapegoat for high prices in regions where the people allow Free-Traders to do their thinking. That seems to be the case in parts of Oklahoma, where an advance of $1 a thousand on common lumber is excused on the ground that the increased Tariff necessitated such a course, when as a matter of fact the duty was reduced 75 cents a thousand. —San Francisco "Chronicle."

The recent Commencement of the Lock Haven State Normal School is note worthy for several reasons; one being the fact that the school graduated the largest class in its history and the other that a very satisfactory lecture and entertainment course was completed during commencement week by a splendid presentation of Shakespeare's "As You Likn It" on front campus by the famous Den Greet players of England. The educational value of this performance was in itself sufficient to warrant the large outlay. It will pay you to see beautiful catalog of this first-class school.

A Fine Orchard.

W. L. Thomas, County Commissioner's clerk, is the possessor of a fine orchard at his home on Whittemore Hill. The orchard contains about sixty apple trees and are all laden with fruit and will probably average five bushels to the tree. If all turns out right there will be a big apple crop. Mr. Thomas brought one little branch to the PRESS office Monday morning, taken from one of his trees, which is only eighteen inches long and has thirty-two apples on it. W. L. has a good dog and two shot guns.

Pleasant Visitors

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Yonker and children, of Sistersville, W. Va., arrived in Emporium last week to visit their parents, Mr. Thos. Cleary and family and Mr. John Schlecht and family. Mr. Yonkers came as far as Erie in his touring car. It is several years since "Fritz" and wife visited Emporium and their many friends here were glad to meet them. Mr. Yonker left for home on Sunday, his extensive business interests calling him back, but Mrs. Yonker and children will remain here for some time.

The PRESS was honored by a call from these excellent friends, last Friday, renewing their paper well into 1911.

FACTS OF HISTORY

WHY REPUBLICANS MUST NOT BE OVER-CONFIDENT.

Three Instances Which Show Danger of Allowing Democrats to Secure Control of Congress—Party Must Exert Itself.

"Cheer up, boys," certain Republican politicians are saying to their followers. "The outlook for November is improving, but even if the Democrats win they are sure to make such use of their victory as to destroy their chances for 1912. They can't stand prosperity. Blundering is their forte, and they are usually on time."

Underrating the enemy is poor generalship. The Democrats have committed many blunders, but they do not always blunder. On several important occasions in the past 30 years they have followed up one victory with another.

In 1874 they carried the house, and two years later came within one electoral vote of carrying the presidency. No congressional slip of theirs on the eve of the Tilden campaign weakened them with the country. They secured a popular majority in 1876.

In 1882 they carried the house, and in 1884 elected Mr. Cleveland president. The Morrison-Randall division on the tariff did not show in the presidential campaign. Upon the whole, Speaker Carlisle guided his house forces remarkably well during the first session of the Forty-eighth congress, and distinguished himself as a presiding officer.

In 1890 the Democrats carried the house by an enormous majority, thereby discrediting for the moment the work of the strongest Republicans in the country outside of the White House. Thomas B. Reed had revised the rules, and his lieutenant, William McKinley, had revised the tariff, and had they held their ground in the congressional elections of that year, Gen. Harrison would probably have been reelected president two years later. But they lost to the Democrats, who, organizing the new house on conservative lines, helped materially to place the party in good position for Mr. Cleveland's third campaign. Judge Crisp in the speaker's chair was an assurance against extremism or flighty maneuvers.

A Democratic house, sitting from December, 1911, until the following summer, might queer the party for its presidential contest, but here are three instances warning the Republicans against putting such a result down as a sure thing. Responsibility sobers men. It has been 18 years since the Democrats elected either a house or a president. While a victory now would be sweet, and might tempt extremists to folly, it would have a sobering effect on the great majority of the Democratic party and probably prevent them from playing into the hands of the opposition.

The only correct appraisement of this year's contest is that which makes it the opening of the presidential campaign. If the Republicans would go into the greater engagement with confidence, they should exert themselves to the utmost to hold the advantage they now possess. Relying upon the enemy to commit an act of folly at a critical time is neither magnificent nor war.—Washington Star.

Republicans Welcome Fight.

For the Republicans there could be nothing better than a square fight on the tariff question next fall. The more the Democrats and the insurgents discussed the question, the weaker would their cause become. Every semblance of popular opposition outside Democratic lines to the provisions of the present law has arisen from misrepresentation of what those provisions are. The Democrats and the insurgents cannot afford to let the light shine, to let the truth be told about the existing law. To tell the truth about the tariff would be to insure an overwhelming Republican victory.—Denver Republican.

Postal Savings Banks.

The administration is moving slowly in the matter of postal savings banks, and is justified. They are a new wrinkle in our affairs, and as they touch what is called "the pocket nerve" should be handled with extreme care. Popular sentiment called for the legislation, but popular understanding of what is possible under it and what will be accomplished by it is meager. Time will be well bestowed in making all preliminaries complete. A hasty and faulty start might be attended with many expensive consequences.

Party Promises Redeemed.

Congress has finished its record. Its members may now return to the people and make an accounting. Not a single honest Republican need hang his head when he faces his constituents. No one need apologize for Taft or the other Republican leaders who helped formulate the record now before the people. The Republican pledges and policies have been carried out.

Again the Old Question.

Mr. Conners says his party can win easily this fall with a "real Democrat." This begs the question. What is a real Democrat?—Buffalo News.

The cost of living, like the tariff, makes easy opportunity for those who delight in saying anything that comes into their heads, especially if it isn't so.—Albany Journal.

STATE TO BE REPUBLICAN

Oklahoma More Than Likely to Line Up With the Party of Good Government.

The unity among the Republicans of Oklahoma means that they will carry the state in November. In the state convention the Payne tariff act as well as the Taft administration was praised in the platform, and an appeal was made to all the members of the party to get together in favor of the state ticket and of the candidates for congress. The state ticket, it is safe to say, will be composed of capable and popular men. The party is in much better shape than it was in the state election of 1907 or in the presidential campaign of 1908.

"I send greetings to the Republicans of Oklahoma," said Mr. Taft, in a telegram to the convention, "and sincerely hope that their organization will be effective to redeem the state, and to make Republican principles victorious in the next election." There is a strong probability that this aspiration will come true. Gov. Haskell has been a very heavy load for the Democrats of the state to carry. Some of his eccentricities compelled the Democratic national committee in 1908 to remove him from his position as one of Bryan's campaign managers. His queer conduct in the state capital fight, now "on," has added to the number of his Democratic and Republican enemies. Although he will not be a candidate for re-election, his record will turn thousands of votes against the Democratic ticket.

The Republican party in Oklahoma is growing with great rapidity. It is growing from two sources—from immigration from Missouri, Kansas, Illinois and other Republican communities, and from the secessions from the Democrats which the lunacies and follies of Haskell and the Democratic machine incite. Haskell carried the state by 27,000 in 1907, but that was before Oklahoma had a chance to become acquainted with him. Bryan's lead in 1908 was only 11,000, and Bryan was more popular in the southwest than any other Democratic candidate would have been. In 1907 the Republicans elected only one out of Oklahoma's five members of the house of representatives. They elected three out of the five in 1908. Thoughtful Oklahoma Democrats are anxious to raise the social quarantine which Haskell's fantastics have erected against their state, and will co-operate with the Republicans for this purpose. November 8, 1910, promises to see a good day's work done for Oklahoma and for the Republican party.

Truly remarkable is the record of legislative achievements made by congress during the session now drawing to a close. In many respects, it is without a parallel in recent congressional history. In a single session nearly all the pledges made by the Republican party in its last national platform have been fulfilled.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

TARIFF TO BE THE QUESTION

Parties Sure to Line Up on That at the Coming Congressional Elections.

To say that the Republican politicians in congress are pleased with the outcome, is putting it too mildly. They are overjoyed with the results of the session and buoyantly hopeful of the future.

What about the Democrats? Well, the Republicans say that the chief assets of the Democracy are calamity and mistakes of the Republican party, and they don't see a visible supply of either asset in this instance. The Democratic campaign will be made solely upon the tariff, it is thought, and on that issue the Republicans are willing to meet them in open field and fair fight.

The Republican party is to stand up for the tariff legislation of this congress, supplemented, as it was, by the provision for an investigation and comparison of cost of foreign products, with a view to future reductions in the tariff where they can be shown to be warranted with due consideration of the welfare of the American workingman.

The Democrats are still hopeful of arousing the country upon the alleged iniquities of the tariff legislation of this congress. The Republicans will meet their advance more than half way.

Republicans contend that the action of the Minnesota state convention defending the tariff legislation, shows the sentiment in the supposedly weak western states, and they insist that it indicates the existence of a sentiment favorable to the system of the protective tariff, with a willingness to trust the administration to smooth out inequalities in the future, and, at any rate, not to turn the job over to the Democrats.

This hopeful view of the Republicans does not imply overconfidence. They know that the battle is not won, that the fight must be made and made with vigor. But they do contend that the roseate Democratic hopes of a month ago have gone glimmering, dissipated by the record of a Republican congress, a record open to inspection of all men and which they say it not to be denied.

Nothing to Be Gained.

Nowhere along the line, state or nation, is anything substantial to be gained for good government by turning out the Republicans and bringing in the Democracy. Is it not reasonable to think that the voters will realize this before November comes?

IN THE LIMELIGHT

TO HEAD MONEY HEPTARCHY

J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., whom Thomas Ryan says is to head an American financial heptarchy, recently has been visiting some of the vast property interests to which he is to fall heir. Young Morgan marveled at the huge steel plants in Pittsburg, a part of the United States Steel corporation—the trust—which is controlled by his father. He also visited the mills at Gary, Ind., which are growing so rapidly, and found much to ponder over there.

Although the impression is far from general, young Morgan is in many ways much like his father. He may not have the latter's organizing genius; that remains to be seen.

But he has the dominating personality and aptitude for business that made the elder Morgan even a decade ago and before he crowned his organization exploits with the formation of the greatest of all industrial combinations—the United States Steel corporation—such a towering figure in the financial world. And for years the younger man has taken an active part in the affairs of both the London and New York houses of J. P. Morgan & Co. But it was not until a year ago that J. P. Morgan, Jr., entered the domain of corporate finance and management.

His election to the directorate and finance committee of the United States Steel corporation and his entrance to the National City bank board of directors indicated unmistakeably the purpose of the father to familiarize the son with more important views than devolved upon him in the ordinary routine of even so great a banking concern as that of J. P. Morgan & Co. Young Morgan is much like his father, physically, as well as mentally. He is tall, robust and fine looking. The temperaments of the two men, however, have little in common. Morgan, Sr., is brusque and saturnine. Morgan, Jr., is genial. What is called personal magnetism is one of the assets that have made him extremely popular in both business and society.

He is also an athlete and outdoor man, this heir to $300,000,000 and the most lucrative banking business in the world, and an ardent sportsman. Seldom does he miss the New York Yacht club's races on Long Island sound, where even in the worst of weather and in his oilskins, looking like the hardiest of Gloucester fishermen, he handles his smart 30-footer Ibis in masterly fashion.

GORST EGYPT'S REAL RULER

The famous speech which Col. Theodore Roosevelt made in London, following the one which he made in Egypt, has attracted attention to that country, and to Sir Eldon Gorst, British agent and consul general in Egypt, who was the real ruler in that part of John Bull's domain.

Sir Eldon Gorst succeeded Lord Cromer in Egypt a little more than three years ago, but previously he had had much experience in that country. He first went to Cairo in 1886 as an attache and has been promoted gradually to his present position. The criticism against him is that he is too conciliatory; that he has not been sufficiently firm in dealing with the Nationalist press which even goes so far as to advocate assassination of the British government representatives. He is a native of New Zealand and is forty-nine years of age. Recently Sir Edward Grey, foreign secretary in the British cabinet, eulogized Gorst and his administration of Egyptian affairs, but in spite of this Gorst is to be replaced by Sir Arthur Hardinge, cousin of the newly-appointed viceroy of India. There is an effort to make it appear that the Roosevelt speech had nothing to do with Gorst's removal, but the people generally accept the idea that the government is taking the ex-prsident's advice and will rule in Egypt with a curb bit in the future.

Egypt owes her present prosperity to the security which comes with the "foreign joke," but there exists a Nationalist party, the ambition of which is independence. Mr. Roosevelt, in addressing these Nationalists, bluntly told them they were not fit for self-government and would not be for several generations.

In England, Mr. Roosevelt followed this up by telling the British their duty was plain. In effect he said that if Great Britain had no right in Egypt it should get out. If it had a right there, then it should rule with a firm hand and establish and maintain order at all costs.

OLD GUERRILLA CHIEF OUT

Col John S. Mosby, the famous Confederate guerrilla of Civil war days has lost his position as a special attorney in the department of justice, after eight years there.

In the absence of Attorney General Wickersham no explanation was made at the department. Old age, that nightmare of superannuated government employees, it is understood, was the main reason for the dismissal.

Col. Mosby is about seventy-three years of age. To his old friends he appears active and energetic. He has been blind in one eye since he was a young man, and lately has been getting deaf.

The colonel's history as a fighting man, his achievements with a small band of guerrillas during the great war between the states, has given him a place in history that has marked him for distinction for many years. He was appointed a special attorney of the department early in the first part of the Roosevelt administration, and was assigned to break up the cattlemen's operations against government lands in the middle west. His fearlessness in this work, in spite of numerous threats, won him the approbation of President Roosevelt. The colonel was one of the investigators of the case which recently led to the sensational charges made by Senator Gore, and his dismissal so soon afterward is regarded as significant.

Colonel Mosby became a Republican some time after the Civil war, believing that to be the best method for securing concessions to the south. He was a special favorite of General Grant, who kept him in the best federal positions to be had and consulted him often as to important government matters.

RAIL CHIEF HAS A SCHOOL

H. E. Byram, vice-president of the Burlington system, has been teaching school in St. Louis. Naturally it is a railroad school and notable from the fact that the occasion was the first upon which the man who recently shouldered the responsibilities of operation of the Burlington System had been in St. Louis.

From the time Mr. Byram left the Chicago headquarters he became a peripatetic pedagogue—a traveling teacher as it were—for he is going all over the Burlington System, meeting members of the operating and traffic staff at division and district headquarters and holding little educational meetings.

He had a school composed of local celebrities in St. Louis. One was W. A. Taloe, assistant general passenger agent, who is studying the question of how to make easy, comfortable and safe riding for passengers. Then there was William Gray, general freight agent of the Missouri district lines. He has up for solution the question of the rapid, correct and safe transportation of freight at compensatory rates.

Tom Knight is making a deep study of how to be a division superintendent and Theodore Rochm is just finishing an elaborate course on promotion in the ranks of the general passenger department.

J. G. Delaplaine has made large advances in the art of "guiding right" the victims of "wanderlust" if they are headed west of Chicago and St. Louis. His last examination papers showed a remarkably high average.

FOR THE LANDSMAN WHO GOES TO SEA

By LEONARD K. HIRSHBERG, A.B., M.D.

ALL adjectives and ills have three degrees—save one. Seasick and seasickness are always in the superlative. Even a "light touch" is agony to the victim, and to him is just as bad as the worst case ever suffered by mortal.

And yet, in itself, seasickness is no more dangerous than a stubbed toe, and not nearly as terrible in its possible effects as a severe bump of the knee. For the knee is one of the most sensitive portions of the anatomy, while the much-abused, yet patient, stomach can stand a lot of bad treatment.

Just what the percentage of average travelers is who succumb to seasickness savants have neglected to figure, but a conservative may place it at about 90 per cent. So, when statistical steamship agents tell you that probably 400,000 persons travel by boat on the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and the great lakes each year, you can easily compute the number of seasick sufferers at 360,000 persons. And seasickness is no respecter of persons—prince and pauper, young and old, man and woman, all alike suffer from its pangs. Even animals feel it, and feel it sorely, while some persons never outgrow it, no matter how often they go to sea.

Sailing out of port on regular trips are more than half a dozen well-known navigators who "pay tribute to Neptune," as it is euphemistically expressed, every time they strike deep water. The attack does not last long with these victims, but it is doubly conspicuous because of their position.

As every one knows, seasickness is caused by the motion of a vessel at sea, but just how the motion acts on the bodily organism is still an open question.

According to some authorities, the violent and unaccustomed movements of the stomach produce gastric disturbances, and these disturbances cause vomiting. By others the theory is advanced that the center of disturbance is the central nervous system, which becomes demoralized by the strange impressions striking the eyes.

Circulation in the medulla oblongata is impeded, say still others, with the result that a sort of storm develops in the nerve controlling the stomach. Finally, others aver that the imagination is much to blame, or that the brain itself is shocked, or that muscular fatigue, caused by efforts to maintain one's balance, is the real cause of the trouble.

On the whole, probably all of these things help. At all events, it makes no difference to the sufferer, and you may select your own cause when you next travel on the briny.

But the first symptoms are somewhat alarming. Comes a faint sense of giddiness; a creepy, chilly feeling of light-headedness. Ofttimes a perspiration breaks out on hands and forehead; your stomach seems sinking—and then comes nausea.

Regardless of the direction of the wind, the victim rushes to the side of the ship and gives up his last meal. Tears fill his eyes and his face grows white and his whole body becomes cold and clammy.

Hanging painfully to a stanchion, the sufferer wots not the passage of time nor cares for the coming of eternity. He is paralyzed, overcome by the pangs of a nameless, unearthly terror. Then kind hands lay hold on him and lead him to his cabin, where he lies in most abject misery for periods varying from 24 hours to the length of the voyage, be it six days or sixteen.

Sometimes, however, nausea does not develop, and this kind of sickness is described by its victims as even worse than that in which one gives up all within him. As the neuseated sufferers say that their form is the worse, the question is still open for discussion.

At all events, no pang known to terra firma equals in sheer terror and misery the despairing, lost sensation of the seasick. First, say those who know whereof they speak, the victim harbors a horrible fear that he is going to die. In the next stage he becomes apathetic and doesn't care a picayune whether he dies or not; in the third stage he hopes that he will die, and prays for surcease from suffering.

"Please throw me overboard." Is the plea frequently urged upon sea captains by unhappy sufferers, and at the time they really mean it.

Finally, the victim fears that he will not die, and longs for strength to enable him to rush to the side and hurl himself into the depthless ocean.

Far from being a dangerous affliction, however, seasickness is beneficial in many cases, and a large majority of travelers are improved in health, rather than harmed, by the complete rest and total abstinence it enforces.

People who never are seasick invariably eat too much at sea, the salt, crisp air whetting their appetites and the luxurious bills of fare tempting their palates and stomachs to overindulgence in good things. But the victim of seasickness cannot eat, and an occasional fast is a mighty good thing for the system.

As far as is known, no one ever died of seasickness, although frequently this cause is ascribed in reports of the death of travelers. In practically all such cases, however, some organic disease has been the real cause, and not the simple seasickness itself.

For example, a woman last summer was carried ashore from an Atlantic liner, unconscious and dying, after suffering from seasickness for the two weeks of the voyage. When the end came, her death was ascribed to exhaustion, following mal-de-mer, but the truth soon was demonstrated that she had been hopelessly ill with a heart malady when she had set sail.

Some veteran traveler once counted one thousand and one alleged remedies for seasickness, but as the end was not in sight he stopped counting and roughly guessed that there must be ten thousand and ten. And each is as good as the other—or as useless. Still, each satisfies the patient's wild yearning to take something for it, and so eases his mind and contributes for it, and so eases his mand ondsOea in some degree to a sort of faith cure. A glass of water given to a nervous woman relieves her immensely, if she is led to believe it contains in solution some subtle and powerful specific.

So, too, with preventive measures; they are as numerous as the vain imaginings of man. Some are absurd and others may really be useful. As a general rule, a landsman preparing for a voyage should prepare by taking, for two or three days before sailing, some mild aperient, preferably one of the less ardent bitter waters. The sea air has the peculiar effect of impeding the intestinal functions of most persons, and the aperient serves to counteract this tendency.

As soon as the first symptom of discomfort strikes you, retire to your cabin and lie down—stretching at full length on the couch. Lie on your side, with your face to the wall and close your eyes. If you use any pillow, let it be a flat one, so that your head may not be elevated. Then try to sleep.

Should this treatment ease you and relieve you, give reverent thanks, and fervent. If however, nausea develops, prepare yourself for the worst of suffering and console yourself with the thought that "you are not the only one."

While the bromides, chloral, cocaine, chloroform and other drugs are useful in combating some of the more violent symptoms of seasickness, none should be taken without the advice of the ship's surgeon. Various wines and liquors also are recommended by certain authorities, but to be effective they must be taken in large quantities. And the relief is only temporary, the patient becoming gloriously drunk and sleeping off his "bun," only to wake up to renewed illness and nausea.

In some cases, however, champagne is really effective in relieving violent nausea, the effect being due to its carbonic acid gas, and practically the same result may be obtained by the use of soda water.

Best of all, say some surgeons of vast experience, is the plan of permitting the initial vomiting to continue.

"Leave the patient alone in his misery for a couple of hours," said one veteran to the writer. "By that time his stomach will be empty. Then give him a goblet of warm water, which will at once be ejected. After that administer half a dram of bromide of potassium in as large a quantity of water as he can swallow. If the bromide solution is concentrated, it will make him vomit again, while if it is sufficiently diluted he will retain it. Put him to bed and an hour or so later give him another dose. Nine times out of ten he will drop off to sleep and will awaken well and hungry."

By other good authorities this treatment is said to be good in smooth water, but ineffective in stress of storm, when they aver, nature must take its course, and the seasick victims can only endure in what patience they may be able to muster.

The growing custom of taking sedatives and sleeping powders on shipboard cannot be too strongly condemned. Cocaine, morphine and similar depressants are contained in most of these elixirs, and, while effective encugh when administered by a regular physician, such things are extremely risky when employed in an unscientific, haphazard manner. While morphine may make a person sleep, its other effects are often dissipation, and in many persons it excites vomiting rather than abates it. In consequence, the prudent voyager will steer clear of all "bracers" that contain it.

So, too, are cocaine, chloral and chloroform and similar "remedies" open to largely the same objection, albeit it is the theory of those who recommend them that they deaden the abnormal sensitiveness of the stomach lining and thus stop the vomiting. This may be all very true, but also it is true that their effects are not limited to the stomach, while, further than this, with healthy persons the vomiting of seasickness is by no means alarming. Indeed, severe "fetching' without vomiting, is often more painful and harmful than the vomiting, and fully as disagreeable.

"Hot water for mine when I'm seasick," says one man, and, "Hot, black coffee for mine," says another, and there you are.

A list of all remedies for seasickness would fill a large book, and would include all the bromides, anodynes, narcotics, opiates and anesthetics, to say nothing of a thousand and one other fearsome things. Besides there is a long list of mechanical devices for the prevention or cure of seasickness. Some persons use tight belts and others are addicted to ice bags on their backs, while another relies upon massage. Yet none of these measures has a sound theory to back it, and none has been found generally efficacious.

Some persons are always seasick, no matter how many voyages they make; others have never been seasick and never will be, no matter how stormy the weather. May you be one of the latter number.

WORDS OF MASTER OF SATIRE

George Bernard Shaw at His Best in Answer to Invitation of Frenchmen.

Rodin's Parisian friends gave him a luncheon in recognition of his promotion to the rank of grand cross of the Legion of Honor. G. B. Shaw, whom the French papers call merely an English humorist, declined an invitation to attend, saying he himself was already assured of immortality, as the encyclopedias will henceforth catalogue him: "Shaw, subject of a bust by Rodin; otherwise unknown."

Shaw concludes:: "To entertain Rodin seems to me to be rather presumptuous. It is as if Adam, after the seven days of creation, had offered a snuffbox to the Almighty with the remark: 'My congratulations! It's quite nicely done.' Personally I do not dare, but I trust Rodin will forgive you. He already has much to forgive his country, so he must be accustomed to it by now."

What he Wished to Know.

"Here's an article in this magazine entitled: 'How to Meet Trouble,'" said Mrs. Wedderly. "Shall I read it to you?"

"No, thank you," replied his wife's husband. "How to dodge trouble is the brand of information I'm looking for."

Avoiding Attention.

"You look sweet enough to kiss."

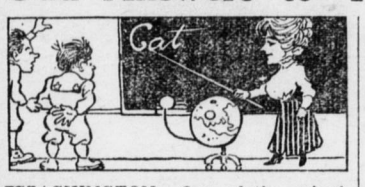
"Well, here is a railway station."

"What's that got to do with it?"

"Stupid! We'll go in there and when a train comes in I will rush up to you and throw myself into your arms."

DOINGS AT THE CAPITAL

Odd Answers to Teachers' Questions



WASHINGTON.—One of the principals in the Washington public schools has been telling her friends of some amusing incidents of the final examinations before the close of the schools for the summer.

Among the questions she gave to the children in the third grade was: "Name the five races of man." Imagine her surprise when one tot answered: "Automobile races, horse races, airship races, foot races and bicycle races."

Another question was: "Name some of the organs of men." To this one child replied: "Mouth organ, hand organ, pipe organ."

The spinal cord was defined as a string running from the back of the head to the bottom of the heels. "Ears," said one, "are just as important as good clothes and should be taken care of just as well. Don't let bugs crawl into your ears, but if one should get in there syringe your ear with soap suds and afterwards drop some molasses into it."

"Poison," wrote another, "should be doctored at once and not allowed to run on as it is dangerous. Don't treat poison rough—it is liable to run into blood poison. If anyone should take poison it is a good idea to keep it as high up out of reach as possible."

"You ought to keep poison in a little room under lock and key in a little bottle and the cork in so it can't be got out and hide the key and have skeleton on the bottle and not let nobody go in there."

"A good anty dote for poison," said one, "is to take a teacupful of soap suds every ten minutes to make you vomit till the doctor comes." (It is awful to think of the doctor's being delayed several hours.)

A class of six-grade pupils were asked to write a short biographical sketch of Longfellow. One member of the class proudly submitted the following:

"H. W. Longfellow was a grand man. He wrote both poems and poetry. He graduated at Bowdoin and afterwards taught the same school where he graduated. He didn't like teaching and decided to learn some other trade, so his school furnished him money to go to Europe and learn to be a poet. He wrote many beautiful poems for children. He wrote "Billy, the Blacksmith."

Rural Free Delivery Is Growing Fast

THE rural free delivery service of the United States means the distribution of nearly 3,000,000 letters and parcels annually along the highways and byways of every state and territory from Maine to Alaska. A force of 41,000 carriers daily go over the routes assigned to them, says a writer in the Bookkeeper.

Bringing the mail to the farmer now costs the nation $36,000,000 a year in salaries for the carriers, expense of examining new routes, maintaining postoffices, payments of inspectors, special agents, clerks and chiefs of bureaus.

To secure information to make changes in routes and carriers, where deemed necessary, to establish new routes and to record and tabulate statistics and data for the postmaster general as well as for the public, a force of only 110 persons is required in Washington, in spite of the great amount of office work and correspondence that must be finished daily.

More than a million letters are received and answered by the department of rural free delivery in a year. Many of those received are merely addressed to the department. To save time of opening and reading missives not properly directed is a part of the work of the mailing section. It includes a private postoffice through which every letter received or sent relative to rural delivery must pass.

Every one of the half-million and more letters sent from this department is copied for record by a mechanical system which saves the labor of a hundred copying clerks even where the hand copying press or the carbon method has been employed. A force of only seventeen clerks is needed in this section, yet in addition to handling and copying mail they keep a daily record of all the outlay for postage expenses of the department and sort and examine the hundreds of letters daily received which must be returned to the postoffice where they should have been directed.

What the service does in receiving applications for new routes, petitions for carriers, decisions of the department, the payments and receipts, is told by the postoffice newspaper. Published every day by the accounting section, it is a record of what every one in this postal counting house, including himself, is doing.

The esprit de corps of the rural free delivery is best shown by the last annual report. During the year it states that out of the 41,000 in the service the total dismissals for cause were only 165, less than the total number of deaths.

The reasons for the dismissals were principally incompetence and failure to obey instructions. No dismissals whatever for stealing from the mails or other dishonesty were on the records.

Baseball and the Declaration Mixed

WASHINGTON had a "safe and sane" celebration of the national birthday. In years gone by the national capital has been noted for the noisiest Fourth of July celebration of any city in the union. Last year they adopted the "safe and sane" idea. Day fireworks and a parade in the morning with speechmaking on the plaza fronting the city buildings. In the afternoon a motor parade and, at night, an illumination of the Monument grounds and more fireworks.

The "safe and sane" idea took well at first and Washington determined to stick by the modern form of celebration this year. Therefore the celebration last Monday began with the reading of the Declaration of Independence in front of the city buildings. Ten o'clock was the hour set, but, as luck would have it, the same hour the Boston Red Sox and the Nationals crossed bats. The Washington Post and the Washington Times have offices opposite the city building. A crowd of about 1,000 people had gathered for the ceremonies. At the newspaper offices the megaphone men had been connected by wire with the baseball park.

Promptly at ten o'clock a baldheaded man in a frock coat arose on the flag draped stand in front of the city building cleared his throat and began:

"When the course of human ev—"

Across the way the megaphone man interrupted with:

"Milan is at the bat—Ball one!"

—"vents it becomes necessary," continued the baldheaded reader.

"Foul—Strike one," roared the megaphone.

The masculine portion of the listeners became restive. Their attention turned in the direction of the megaphone man and their backs toward the baldheaded patriot.

"for one people to dissolve the polit—"

"He hits to left—For two bases—Lelivelt at the bat—

By this time 794 male members of the Independence day audience had dashed madly across to Newspaper Row. Of the original audience of the "safe and sane" celebration, 134 women 22 children, a salubriously intoxicated cab driver and the police guard remained.

"Lelivelt sacrifices————Hilberfeld singles————Milan scores."

"Hurrah!————Wow! Wow!" bellowed the crowd and the remainder of the reading of the glorious document was interspersed with "Good boy, Doc!" "Oh, you Gabby Street!" for 14 hot innings.

But Boston won.

Why Burton Didn't Climb Mountains

SINCE Senator Burton took his congressional investigators of European waterways abroad he has been relating this one. The senator was in Switzerland. In front of the hotel at which he was stopping a mountain climbing party was arranging for a start to the top of one of the lesser Alpine peaks. The guide was as busy as a bird dog nosing around, and giving limitless advice and instruction in what to do and how to do it.

"Is he a thoroughly skilled climber?" asked the Ohioan of the hotel proprietor.

"Ah, zat he ees," exclaimed the host face. "He have lost two partez of tourrents down zee mountaine side and how times he have come off wizout so mooch as zee one leetle scratch."

Burton did not climb any mountains during his sojourn.

The "Done Up" Shirt Waist.

Half the looks of a shirt waist depend on the way it is done up. If it is washed with cheap strong yellow soap, so that it gets streaked and stained instead of being cleaned and beautified, it is "done up" sure enough. The woman who values her personal appearance—and that means every woman—will see to it that her shirt waists are laundered with a soap that leaves them white and clean and sweet and new-looking. Easy Task soap is the only one that will do this. Same price as others—five cents a cake, and the greatest enemy to dirt and friend to fabrics ever made.

Plenty of Material.

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md. — "For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. FORD, 2207 W. Franklin St., Baltimore, Md.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and to-day is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.

The Tariff as a factor in the higher prices was always a negligible quantity—we shall have just as low prices under this Tariff as we ever had, and the only fear we need to have is that price, in many lines, may fall too low, especially on the products of the farms. —Cedar Rapids "Republican."

A low Tariff by taking wages and salaries and business prosperity out of this country and placing them in other countries does make low prices for the farmer's products, and a genuine Protective Tariff, by keeping wages and salaries and business in this country does give the buyers of the farmer's products the wherewithal to buy.—Kansas City "Journal."

News Snapshots Of the Week

General Baden-Powell, founder "boy scout" movement, may on American visit inspect youthful scouts. Central figures in Spain's disagreement with Catholic church are Spanish Premier Jose Canalejas and Cardinal Merry del Val. Senator Crane of Massachusetts began western trip to view political situation. Through aid of Captain Kendall of steamship Montrose and wireless alleged murderer, Dr. Hawley H. The Delineator for September.

"Seven Times a Servant," will arouse the curiosity and interest of all who read The Delinator for September. The first article in a series of social of and sociological studies by Anne Forsyth, a college girl who tried the experiment of earning a living in the "protected environment" of American homes, will be found as facinating as a piece of dramatic fiction.

In "Conversazione," the editorial department of The Delineator' Erman J. Ridway gives advice to the women who think they can not afford time or money for play. For all the weary work-worn Jills who have been helping carry numberless pails of water up countless hills he sounds a note of good cheer. Incidentally, he has something to say about our man-made, every-day maxims and calls attention to curious facts concerning them. As usual, "Conversazione" is a page of brilliant philosophy in which sparkle many witty sayings.

"To The Witness Stand—The Workingman's Wife," by Mary G. Field is a masterly presentation of testimony offered by women who have had actual knowledge of what the high cost of living means to the average family. "The Danger-Line in Patent Medicines," by Woods Hutchinson, M. D., is one of the important articles of the month. John Warren tells of "Women Who Are Making Musical America," and Harrison Rhodes has many amusing things to say about "Americans Abroad."

The fiction includes "Out of the Wilderness" by Dorothy Canfield; "Love and Mademoisella Clemence" by Helen Sterling Thomas; "The Brother Man" by Zona Gale and Mary Stewart Cutting's serial, "The Unforeseen."

Getting Desperate.

Some of the office buildings in the large cities are constructed apparently with the idea that every possible square foot of space must be utilized for renting purposes. The corridors are narrow, the passageways to the elevator shafts hard to find and the stairways located in obscure corners. There may be fire escapes, but they are equally obscure, and a stranger would not know where to look for them.

The occupants of a room on the seventh floor of a building of this kind, devoted to the uses of a fire and life insurance companies' agent, were surprised one day by the sudden entrance of a wild eyed man who seemed to be laboring under strong excitement.

"Say," gasped the intruder, "will some of you fellows please throw me out of this building!"

"What for?" asked one of the clerks.

"I've been trying for fifteen minutes to find a way out of it, and I can't."

They did not throw him out, but piloted him to the elevators, and he succeeded at last in making his escape.—Exchange.

Nearly a School Scandal.

What might have been a terrible sensation, calling for public investigation and much newspaperiety, was averted by the visit of a shocked mamma to one of our public primary schools. A friend of the mother was calling at the house and asked the little daughter, "How do you like your teacher?"

"Oh, my teacher is nice," answered Tot, "but she is always asking us for a cigarette."

"What?" cried the lady and the mamma in horrified tones, seeing contamination of the morals of Tot under the teachings of a modern bachelor of the feminine gender.

"Yes, mamma. She says, 'Cigarette, cigarette.'"

The next day mamma visited the school. As she entered the class room the teacher was calling first to one child and then to another, "Sit erect, sit erect!" while Tot flashed a glance of intelligence and "Didn't I tell you so?" at her mother.—Wasp.

The New Page.

"Look here, Wilkins," said a doctor to his boy in buttons, whom he had occasion to reprimand, "I can't stand any more of this nonsense. You'll have to turn over a fresh leaf."

"All right, sir," was the witty response; "you shan't complain of me again, sir. I'll be an entirely new page."—London Opinion.

All on One Side.

"I am told your bride is very pretty," said Miss Peppery.

"Yes, indeed!" replied Mr. Con Seet. "Several of the guests at the ceremony were pleased to call it a 'wedding of beauty and brains.'"

"Well, well! She must be a remarkable woman! That's an unusual combination in one person."

In the Stilly Night.

"What is it?" the druggist sleepily inquired from his bedroom window.

"This ish drug store, ain't it?" asked the man who had rung the night bell.

"Yes. What do you want?"

"Want to look in your city directory minute an' shee where I live."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"Black Bart," Road Agent.

Charles E. Bolles, known to fame as "Black Bart," was incomparably the most conspicuous character in the history of western stage robbers. From 1875 to 1883 "Black Bart" is known to have committed twenty-seven stage robberies single handed. Northern California stage drivers stood in constant fear of this unique desperado. On various occasions the drivers were able to give a good description of his figure, hair, feet and hands, yet no clew to his actual identity was gained during the eight years of his stage robbing career. He was finally betrayed by a laundry mark on a cuff which had dropped from his wrist when opening a treasure box which he had taken from a Wells Fargo stage in San Joaquin valley. When he was finally captured in San Francisco the detectives were amazed to find the famous "Black Bart" a slight, quiet mannered man of fifty-five, familiar in face to all the San Francisco detectives. He had for years frequented a little restaurant near police headquarters where many of the detectives dined.—W. C. Jenkins in National Magazine.

Got It at Last.

It is told of a distinguished professor of history that, in an address before a woman's club on "Obscure Heroes of the French Revolution," he had reached the point where one of them, nobly resolved to essay the rescue of a friend doomed to the guillotine, sought a parting interview with his sweetheart before making the almost hopeless attempt. The professor had a moving voice and was eloquent. The assembly of women, many of them already near tears, hung breathless upon his words.

"Biddy, diddy," said he pathetically, then coughed slightly and went back. "Hiddy biddy"— Something was evidently amiss. He tried again.

"Biddy hiddy diddy doo."

By this time the ladies looked puzzled and the orator desperate. Drawing a long breath and speaking with painful deliberation, he at length conquered the elusive syllables and said:

"Did he bid adieu?"—Youth's Companion.

Unconscious Humor.

Mark Twain, as an example of unconscious humor, used to quote a Hartford woman who said one day in the late spring:

"My husband is the dearest fellow.

"'Jim,' I said to him this morning, 'are you very hard up just now?'

"'I certainly am hard up,' he replied soberly. 'This high cost of living is terrible. I don't know what I'm going to do.'

"'Then, Jim,' said I, 'I'll give up all thought of going to the country for July and August this year.'

"But the dear fellow's face changed, and he said:

"'Indeed, then, you won't, darling. I thought you wanted to buy a hat with an aigret or some such foolishness. No, no, my darling! Jim can always find the money to let his dear little wife go to the country."—Washington Star.

Looking For "the Crazy Ones."

A woman got off a Darby car at Thirty-fourth street and Woodland avenue the other day, entered the university campus and started toward College hall, walking with brisk determination, yet looking wonderingly about her the while.

In front of the library a university youth met her, and she accosted him quickly.

"Young man," she said, "will you please tell me where they keep the crazy ones?"

"Wh-what?" stammered the college man.

She repeated her question in somewhat different form.

"I want the insane department," she said. "I have a friend who is a nurse there. I thought I'd make her a little visit. Isn't this the Philadelphia hospital?"—Philadelphia Times.

"The Quarrel, I Believe."

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night, she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. She passed a terrible night, which was filled with unseemly noises. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff button in a clothes hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot. A strange man was found shot to death in the hall. It proved to be the body of Arnold Armstrong, whose banker father owned the country house. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson and the coroner arrived. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she had talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder.

"The quarrel, I believe," he persisted, "was about Mr. Armstrong's conduct to you, Miss Gertrude. He had been paying you unwelcome attentions."

And I had never seen the man!

When she nodded a "yes" I saw the tremendous possibilities involved. If this detective could prove that Gertrude feared and disliked the murdered man, and that Mr. Armstrong had been annoying and possibly pursuing her with hateful attentions, all that, added to Gertrude's confession of her presence in the billiard room at the time of the crime, looked strange, to say the least. The prominence of the family assured a strenuous effort to find the murderer, and if we had nothing worse to look forward to, we were sure of a distasteful publicity.

Mr. Jamieson shut his note-book with a snap and thanked us.

"I have an idea," he said, apropos of nothing at all, "that at any rate the ghost is laid here. Whatever the rappings have been—and the colored man says they began when the family went west three months ago—they are likely to stop now."

Which shows how much he knew about it. The ghost was not laid; with the murder of Arnold Armstrong he, or it, only seemed to take on fresh vigor.

Mr. Jamieson left then, and when Gertrude had gone upstairs, as she did at once, I sat and thought over what I had just heard. Her engagement, once so engrossing a matter, paled now beside the significance of her story. If Halsey and Jack Bailey had left before the crime, how came Halsey's revolver in the tulip bed? What was the mysterious cause of their sudden flight? What had Gertrude left in the billiard room? What was the significance of the cuff-link and where was it?

CHAPTER VI.

In the East Corridor.

When the detective left he enjoined absolute secrecy on everybody in the household. The Greenwood club promised the same thing, and as there are no Sunday afternoon papers, the murder was not publicly known until Monday. The coroner himself notified the Armstrong family lawyer, and early in the afternoon he came out. I had not seen Mr. Jamieson since morning, but I knew he had been interrogating the servants. Gertrude was locked in her room with a headache, and I had luncheon alone.

Mr. Harton, the lawyer, was a little, thin man, and he looked as if he did not relish his business that day.

"This is very unfortunate, Miss Innes," he said, after we had shaken hands. "Most unfortunate—and mysterious. With the father and mother in the west, I find everything devolves on me; and, as you can understand, it is an unpleasant duty."

"No doubt," I said absently. "Mr. Harton, I am going to ask you some questions, and I hope you will answer them. I feel that I am entitled to some knowledge, because I and my family are just now in a most ambiguous position."

I don't know whether he understood me or not; he took off his glasses and wiped them.

"I shall be very happy," he said with old-fashioned courtesy.

"Thank you. Mr Harton, did Mr. Arnold Armstrong know that Sunnyside had been rented?"

"I think—yes, he did. In fact, I myself told him about it."

"And he knew who the tenants were?"

"Yes."

"He had not been living with the family for some years, I believe?"

"No. Unfortunately, there had been trouble between Arnold and his father. For two years he had lived in town."

"Then it would be unlikely that he came here last night to get possession of anything belonging to him?"

"I should think it hardly possible," he admitted. "To be perfectly frank, Miss Innes, I can not think of any reason whatever for his coming here as he did. He had been staying at the club house across the valley for the last week, Jarvis tells me, but that only explains how he came here, not why. It is a most unfortunate family."

He shook his head despondently, and I felt that this dried-up little man was the repository of much that he had not told me. I gave up trying to elicit any information from him, and we went together to view the body before it was taken to the city. It had been lifted on to the billiard-table and a sheet thrown over it; otherwise nothing had been touched. A soft hat lay beside it, and the collar of the dinner-coat was still turned up. The handsome, dissipated face of Arnold Armstrong, purged of its ugly lines, was now only pathetic. As we went in Mrs. Watson appeared at the card-room door.

"Come in, Mrs. Watson," the lawyer said. But she shook her head and withdrew; she was the only one in the house who seemed to regret the dead man, and even she seemed rather shocked than sorry.

Before Mr. Harton left, he told me something of the Armstrong family. Paul Armstrong, the father, had been married twice. Arnold was a son by the first marriage. The second Mrs. Armstrong had been a widow, with a child, a little girl. This child, now perhaps 20, was Louise Armstrong, having taken her stepfather's name, and was at present in California with the family.

"They will probably return at once," he concluded, "and part of my errand here to-day is to see if you will relinquish your lease here in their favor."

"We would better wait and see if they wish to come," I said. "It seems unlikely, and my town house is being remodeled." At that he let the matter drop, but it came up unpleasantly enough, later.

At six o'clock the body was taken away, and at seven-thirty, after an early dinner, Mr. Harton went. Gertrude had not come down, and there was no news of Halsey. Mr. Jamieson had taken a lodging in the village, and I had not seen him since mid-afternoon. It was about nine o'clock, I think, when the bell rang and he was ushered into the living room.

"Sit down," I said grimly. "Have you found a clew that will incriminate me, Mr. Jamieson?"

He had the grace to look uncomfortable. "No," he said. "If you had killed Mr. Armstrong, you would have left no clews. You would have had too much intelligence."

After that we got along better. He was fishing in his pocket, and after a minute he brought out two scraps of paper. "I have been to the clubhouse," he said, "and among Mr. Armstrong's effects, I found these. One is curious; the other is puzzling."

The first was a sheet of club notepaper on which was written, over and over, the name "Halsey B. Innes." It was Halsey's flowing signature to a dot, but it lacked Halsey's ease. The ones toward the bottom of the sheet were much better than the top ones. Mr. Jamieson smiled at my face.

"His old tricks," he said. "That one is merely curious; this one, as I said before, is puzzling."

The second scrap, folded and refolded into a compass so that that the writing had been partly obliterated, was part of a letter—the lower half of a sheet, not typed, but written in a cramped hand.

——by altering the plans for—— rooms, may be possible. The best way, in my opinion would be to——the plans for——to one of the——rooms——chimney.

That was all.

"Well?" I said, looking up. "There is nothing in that, is there? A man ought to be able to change the plan of his house without becoming an object of suspicion."

"There is little in the paper itself," he admitted; "but why should Arnold Armstrong carry that around, unless it meant something? He never built a house, you may be sure of that. If it is this house, it may mean anything from a secret room—"

"To an extra bathroom," I said scornfully. "Haven't you a thumbprint, too?"

"I have," he said with a smile, "and the print of a foot in a tulip bed, and a number of other things. The oddest part is, Miss Innes, that the thumb-mark is probably yours and the footprint certainly."

His audacity was the only thing that saved me; his amused smile put me on my mettle, and I ripped out a perfectly good scallop before I answered.

"Why did I step into the tulip bed?" I asked with interest.

"You picked up something," he said good-humoredly, "which you are going to tell me about later."

"Am I, indeed?" I was politely curious. "With this remarkable insight of yours, I wish you would tell me where I shall find my four-thousand-dollar motorcar."

"I was just coming to that," he said. "You will find it about 30 miles away, at Andrews Station, in a blacksmith shop, where it is being repaired."

I laid down my knitting then and looked at him.

"And Halsey?" I managed to say.

"We are going to exchange information," he said. "I am going to tell you that, when you tell me what you picked up in the tulip bed."

We looked steadily at each other; it was not an unfriendly stare; we were only measuring weapons. Then he smiled a little and got up.

"With your permission," he said, "I am going to examine the card room and the staircase again. You might think over my offer in the meantime."

He went on through the drawing room, and I listened to his footsteps growing gradually fainter. I dropped my pretence at knitting and, leaning back, I thought over the last 48 hours. Here was I, Rachel Innes, spinster, a granddaughter of old John Innes of revolutionary days, a D. A. R., a Colonial Dame, mixed up with a vulgar and revolting crime, and even attempting to hoodwink the law! Certainly I had left the straight and narrow way.

I was roused by hearing Mr. Jamieson coming rapidly back through the drawing room. He stopped at the door.

"Miss Innes," he said quickly, "will you come with me and light the east corridor? I have fastened somebody in the small room at the head of the card room stairs."

I jumped up at once.

"You mean—the murderer?" I gasped.

"Possibly," he said quietly, as we hurried together up the stairs. "Some one was lurking on the staircase when I went back. I spoke; instead of an answer, whoever it was turned and ran up. I followed—it was dark—but as I turned the corner at the top a figure darted through this door and closed it. The bolt was on my side, and I pushed it forward. It is a closet, I think." We were in the upper hall now. "If you will show me the electric switch, Miss Innes, you would better wait in your own room."

Trembling as I was, I was determined to see that door opened. I hardly knew what I feared, but so many terrible and inexplicable things had happened that suspense was worse than certainty.

"I am perfectly cool," I said, "and I am going to remain here."

The lights flashed up along that end of the corridor, throwing the doors into relief. At the intersection of the small hallway with the larger, the circular staircase wound its way up, as if it had been an afterthought of the architect. And just around the corner, in the small corridor, was the door Mr. Jamieson had indicated. I was still unfamiliar with the house, and I did not remember the door. My heart was thumping wildly in my ears, but I nodded to him to go ahead. I was perhaps eight or ten feet away—and then he threw the bolt back.

"Come out," he said quietly. There was no response. "Come—out," he repeated. Then—I think he had a revolver, but I am not sure—he stepped aside and threw the door open.

From where I stood I could not see beyond the door, but I saw Mr. Jamieson's face change and heard him mutter something, then he bolted down the stairs, three at a time. When my knees had stopped shaking, I moved forward, slowly, nervously, until I had a partial view of what was beyond the door. It seemed at first to be a closet, empty. Then I went close and examined it, to stop with a shudder. Where the floor should have been was black void and darkness, from which came the indescribable damp smell of the cellars.

Mr. Jamieson had locked somebody in the clothes chute. As I leaned over I fancied I heard a groan—or was it the wind?

CHAPTER VII.

A Sprained Ankle.

I was panic-stricken. As I ran along the corridor I was confident that the mysterious intruder and probable murderer had been found, and that he lay dead or dying at the foot of the chute. I got down the staircase somehow, and through the kitchen to the basement stairs. Mr. Jamieson had been before me, and the door stood open. Liddy was standing in the middle of the kitchen holding a frying pan by the handle as a weapon.

"Don't go down there," she yelled, when she saw me moving toward the basement sairs. "Don't you do it, Miss Rachel. That Jamieson's down there now. There's only trouble comes of hunting ghosts; they lead you into bottomless pits and things like that. Oh, Miss Rachel, don't—" as I tried to get past her.

She was interrupted by Mr. Jamieson's reappearance. He ran up the stairs two at a time, and his face was flushed and furious.

"The whole place is locked," he said angrily, "Where's the laundry key kept?"

"It's kept in the door," Liddy snapped. "That whole end of the cellar is kept locked, so nobody can get at the clothes, and then the key's left in the door, so that unless a thief was as blind as—as some detectives, he could walk right in."

Bolted Down Stairs, Three at a Time.

"Liddy," I said sharply, "come down with us and turn on all the lights."

She offered her resignation, as usual, on the spot, but I took her by the arm, and she came along finally. She switched on all the lights and pointed to a door just ahead.

"That's the door," she said sulkily. "The key's in it."

But the key was not in it. Mr. Jamieson shook it, but it was a heavy door, well locked. And then he stooped and began punching around the keyhole with the end of a lead pencil. When he stood up his face was exultant.

"It's locked on the inside," he said in a low tone. "There is somebody in there."

"Lord have mercy!" gasped Liddy, and turned to run.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Where It Goes.

"That man made an immense fortune out of a simple little invention." "Indeed! What did he invent?" "Invent? Nothing, you dub! He was the promoter!"

LEADING MISTAKES IN LIFE

Writer Has Recorded Ten, of Which Most of Us Assuredly Have Our Share.

Some of us may be glad to be told that there are only ten life mistakes, for there seem to be so many more, but a recent writer has catalogued them. Perhaps these are only the ten leading ones from which the smaller errors arise. Let's look over the list and see how many of them are ours: First, to set up our own standard of right and wrong and judge people accordingly; second, to measure the enjoyment of others by our own; third, to expect uniformity of opinion in this world; fourth, to look for judgment and experience in youth; fifth, to endeavor to mold all dispositions alike; sixth, to look for perfection in our own actions; seventh, to worry ourselves and others with what cannot be remedied; eighth, to refuse to yield in immaterial matters; ninth, to refuse to alleviate, so far as it lies in our power, all which needs alleviation; tenth, to refuse to make allowance for the infirmities of others.

SKIN TROUBLES

A Healing Ointment With a Wide Range of Usefulness

A letter from Mrs. I. E. Cameron, Graduate Nurse, Augusta, Me., says: "I must write and tell you the good Resinol Ointment has done. I applied it to an ulcerated leg of six months' standing. Almost everything had been tried to heal it. Resinol was applied twice a day for four weeks, and the ulcers are entirely healed. It is now six months since the treatment and no indication of a return of the trouble. I have used Resinol for eruptions on children's faces, and for everything that seemed to need an ointment, with satisfactory results in every case."

Mrs. F. Cox, Chicago, Ill., says in another letter: "I cannot speak too highly of Resinol Ointment and Soap. They cured my baby boy of Eczema. He had a very severe case. Numerous other remedies had been tried and failed to do any good. I would not be without them in the house."

The first application will relieve the itching and irritation in skin diseases, and stop the pain in burns or scalds. Chafing, Sunburn, Poison Ivy eruptions are often cured by an overnight application.

Resinol Ointment, Resinol Soap and Resinol Medicated Shaving Stick are sold at all Drug Stores.

EPIDEMIC OF ITCH IN WELSH VILLAGE

"In Dowlais, South Wales, about fifteen years ago, families were stricken wholesale by a disease known as the itch. Believe me, it is the most terrible disease of its kind that I know of, as it itches all through your body and makes your life an inferno. Sleep is out of the question and you feel as if a million mosquitoes were attacking you at the same time. I knew a dozen families that were so affected.

"The doctors did their best, but their remedies were of no avail whatever. Then the families tried a druggist who was noted far and wide for his remarkable cures. People came to him from all parts of the country for treatment, but his medicine made matters still worse, as a last resort they were advised by a friend to use the Cuticura Remedies. I am glad to tell you that after a few days' treatment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, the effect was wonderful and the result was a perfect cure in all cases.

"I may add that my three brothers, three sisters, myself and all our families have been users of the Cuticura Remedies for fifteen years. Thomas Hugh, 1650 West Huron St., Chicago, Ill., June 29, 1909."

The Modern Idea.

And you don't love him?"

"No."

"Then why marry him?"

"Oh, I might as well. Every girl has to have a foolish marriage or two before she really settles down."

Advice.

"Father," queried Bob, just home from college, "you've worked for me pretty hard nearly all my life, haven't you?"

"Quite right, quite right, son," mused father, retrospectively.

"Just so," returned Bob, briskly. "Now, you had better get busy and work for yourself a bit—eh, dad?"—Life.

Initials.

"What are Mr. Wise's initials?"

"Can't say. He has been taking so many college degrees that nobody can keep track of them."

For High Occasions

BY JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

A GROUP of handsomely gowned women, dressed for a social function requiring their best efforts, shows the more or less beautiful effects which have been brought about in draped skirts. Fashion has turned a smiling face to this innovation; it is welcomed more for its possibilities than for its accomplishments. It must be confessed that a "built to order" figure and natural grace of carriage are required to redeem some of the models from clumsiness, but given slenderness and grace in the wearer, costumers have turned out a few unforgetable models, with touches of beauty not to be achieved, except by the employment of draped effects. One of these was brought out in the gown made for a maid of honor in a wedding in what we are pleased to call high life. This gown, of marquisette, over voile, which in turn was posed over messaline, showed the marquisette turned up about the bottom of the drapery, providing a nestling place for a long band of roses which were held by it as one holds an apron full of roses. The panier drapery, which was heralded with much noise—mostly of alarm—failed to be accepted except in a form so modified that its identity was lost. A trace of it is seen in the figure at the left of the group.

The drapery which has met with most success falls in straight lines nearly to the foot of the skirt where it is confined in various ways. Sometimes a band of embroidery gathers it in; sometimes it is gathered into several points and fastened to the skirt with ornaments, or buckles. Most often it falls free in front and is gathered to a point at the back where it is confined by a buckle made of the same material as the dress.

The center figure shows a gown embodying the best liked of the season's new features. This is the inlay of a plain broad band of lace or silk on the material. The top edge is shaped usually in slanting lines, but many gowns are finished with plain broad bands of material, heavier than that employed in the body of the dress.

Embroidery in rich and varied colors is introduced in nearly all gowns for state occasions. Bits of Persian and other Oriental designs in silk add to the appearance of intricate designing in these costumes. As a result gowns are brilliant.

Chiffon coats in long, clinging lines are worn over these sparkling creations. The effect is very fine and emphasizes once more the liking for Oriental splendor in the use of colors. We are borrowing ideas from all over the world, making them our own. And in turn we are impressing the rest of the world with ideas of our own.

STRIPED LINEN DRESS.

There is no smarter design for a young girl's dress than this; our model is in blue striped linen with trimming of plain lining of the darker shade of stripes. The panel back and front of the princess part are put on in wrapped seams; the lower half of skirt is arranged in well folded box-plaits, headed by a fish-wife trimming.

White Belts.

The white washable belts for wear with trim shirtwaist suits of white goods are exceedingly attractive, while the prices at which they are marked are cheap.

The smartest of these belts close with small round or oval white pearl buckles, which can be removed when laundering.

Imagine a white duck belt so fitted, one and one-half inches wide, at 40 cents, and a pretty white mercerized embroidered jacquard belt a little wider at 18 cents.

Twenty-five cents will buy a white linen all-over embroidered belt, stitched edge and lined, and 35 cents the same design in a better quality.

HAT PIN OF SEALING WAX

Very Little Skill Required to Turn Out Article at Once Pretty and Useful.

Wonderfully pretty hat pins can be made out of plain, ordinary sealing wax, and they require very little skill in the making. A plain hat pin is taken and a knob formed on it of red sealing wax, which has been found to make the best foundation. When the knob has become thoroughly hard it is covered with as thick a layer of wax as desired, according to the size that is preferred for the hat pin, this layer being, of course, the color of the hat for which the pin is intended.

Round, square, flat, oblong and, in fact, all sizes and shapes imaginable are to be seen in the fashionable hat pins of the moment, so that the maker is given a wide range of ingenuity. To obtain the required shape the wax must be worked and molded with the fingers while in a half molten state, but care must be taken not to try to work it too soon, for nothing burns more cruelly than boiling wax. As soon as the wax is near enough the desired shape it should be plunged into cold water to harden. When quite hard another application of a different colored wax may be given. This last may be put on in streaks or circles, to give the effect of a definite design. Two shades of blue, for example, used in this way will be most effective, while a bit of gold or silver sealing wax should always be at hand for embellishing the more somber colors.

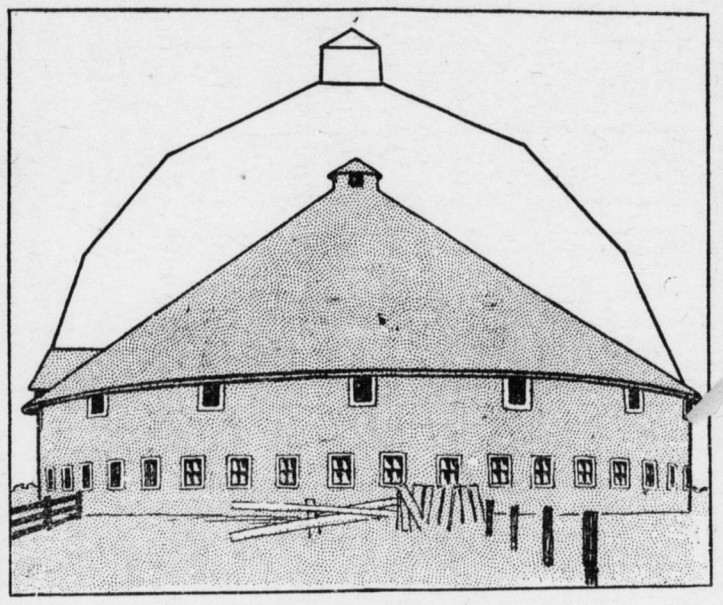
With a little practice numberless different designs can be worked out and soon, with just a little skill, a girl can provide herself with a pretty set of smart pins for each and every hat, and all these for the small cost of a few long pins and a box of sealing wax.

Sane Advice to Girls.

Marcel Boulanger, a noted French writer, gives this sane advice to girls: "Remember, girls, that your faces really matter little or nothing. To preserve for a long time the illusion that you are as fresh as the morning and to show off dress to the best advantage, you must study your bodies above everything else and become mistress of the art of movement and charm. Never allow yourself to become 'slack,' carry yourselves well, keep in good health and keep your minds keen. And, above all, don't become round shouldered and crooked by constantly sitting in one position for hours playing bridge. Take plenty of fresh air and exercise and live as life ought to be lived."

STRENGTH AND CHEAPNESS OF ROUND DAIRY BARN

Several Points of Superiority Over Rectangular Formed Structure Have Never Been Fully Considered.



Round Dairy Barn.

In the early days when lumber was cheap, buildings were built of logs, or at least had heavy frames. Under these conditions the rectangular barn was the one naturally used, and people have followed in the footsteps of their forefathers in continuing this form of barn. The result is that the economy and advantages of the round barn have apparently never been considered. This is because they are not obvious at first sight, and become fully apparent only after a detailed study of the construction. For these reasons, the rectangular form still continues to be built, although it requires much more lumber. As the price of lumber has advanced so materially in recent years, the possible saving in this material is a large item, and well worth investigating.

The difficulty with most round barns that have been built, thus far, is that they do not have a self-supporting roof, and consequently lost many of the advantages of a properly constructed round barn. This is the principal reason why round barns have not become more popular. A straight roof necessarily requires many supports in the barn below. These are both costly and inconvenient, and make the roof no stronger than a dome-shaped, self-supporting roof which nearly doubles the capacity of the mow.

Many who have thus disregarded capacity have also wasted lumber and made a needless amount of work by chopping or hewing out the sill and plate, thus requiring more labor and lumber, besides sacrificing the greater strength of a built-up sill.

Another reason for the scarcity of round barns is the difficulty in getting them built. Most carpenters hesitate to undertake the work because in the erection of a round barn the construction should be entirely different from that of the rectangular form. Many new problems present themselves, but when these are once understood, the round barn offers no more difficulties in construction than the rectangular form.

The first thing to consider in the erection of a barn is a convenient arrangement for the purpose for which it is to be used.

Considering that the barn on a dairy farm is used twice every day in the year, and that for six months each year the cows occupy it almost continuously, and that during this time a large amount of the labor of the farm is done inside the barn, it is evident that the question of its convenience is a vital one.

The circular construction is the strongest, because it takes advantage of the lineal, instead of the breaking strength of the lumber. Each row of boards running around the barn forms a hoop that holds the barn together. A barrel, properly hooped and headed, is almost indestructible, and much stronger than a box, although the hoops are small. This strength is because the stress comes on the hoops in a lineal direction. Any piece of timber is many times stronger on a lineal pull than on a breaking stress.

All exposed surfaces of round barns are circular, as both the sides and roof are arched, which is the strongest form of construction to resist wind pressure; besides, the wind in striking it, glances off and can get no direct hold on the walls or roof, as it can on the flat sides or gable ends of a rectangular structure. If the lumber is properly placed in a round

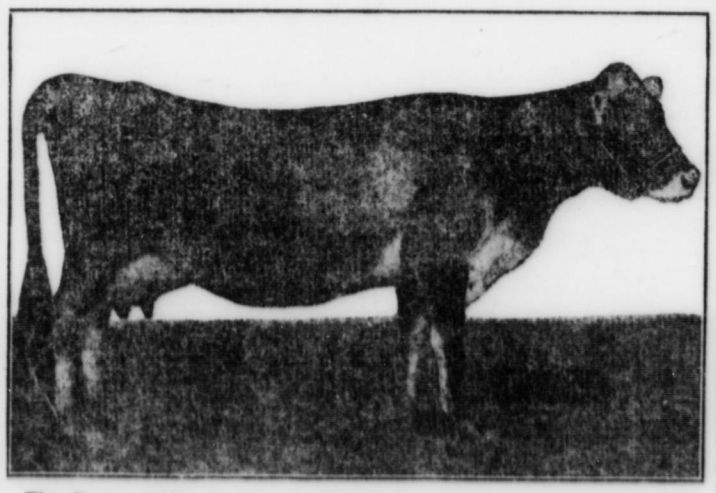
If the lumber is properly placed in a round barn, much of it will perform two or more functions. Every row of siding boards running around the building serves also as a brace, and the same is true of the roof boards and the arched rafters. If the siding is put on vertically and the roof built dome shaped, no scaffolding is required inside or out. These are points of great economy in the round construction.

EXCELLENT BROWN SWISS COW



The Brown Swiss is one of the standard breeds from Switzerland. It has become generally distributed throughout Europe and was first imported into the United States in 1869. Brown Swiss cattle are well adapted to conditions when a combination of dairy and beef production is sought, says Orange Judd Farmer. The size is medium; cows weigh 1,200 to 1,300 pounds. The quantity of milk is moderately large and the fat content good. According to the American standard, the color is dark to light brown, or some seasons of the year gray. The attractive cow, here shown, Follo 1552, was bred in New York and made a record of 4,403 pounds milk in 120 days.

Sowing Late Cabbage.

It is time to sow late cabbage in all sections. See that the seed bed is fine and moist. Cover seed with not less than three-fourths of an inch of soil and do not sow too thickly. Thin sowings encourage the growth of strong, stalky plants which stand transplanting better than spindling plants.

Always pick vegetables for the market before they are fully matured, as they are then more apt to ripen at the proper time for the user.

Try This, This Summer.

The very next time you're hot, tired or thirsty, step up to a soda fountain and get a glass of Coca-Cola. It will cool you off, relieve your bodily and mental fatigue and quench your thirst delightfully. At soda fountains or carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Delicious, refreshing and wholesome. Send to the Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga., for their free booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells what Coca-Cola is and why it is so delicious, refreshing and thirst-quenching. Immense Saving Possible.

In a preliminary bulletin on the cost of maintaining a tuberculosis sanatorium, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis announces that the average cost per patient per day in thirty semi-charitable sanatoria scattered in all parts of the United States is $1.669. These institutions represent an annual expenditure of over $1,300,000 and over 815,000 days of treatment given each year. The bulletin, which is part of an extensive study the National association is making for its bureau of information, points out that the country could save annually at least $150,000,000 if the indigent consumptives were properly segregated.

More Serious.

"Mathilde Browne was very rude to an overdressed old woman she met on the street the other day."

"I know the story. The old woman turned out to be Mathilde's very rich aunt, and now she's going to give all her money to a hospital for decrepit dogs."

"Nothing of the sort. In fact, it's worse. The old woman was the Brownes' new cook—and now they haven't any."

Can You Save?

Certainly you can save, if there is an incentive. Lots of women in Columbus are saving wrappers from Easy Task soap. You know if you send twenty-five of the wrappers and a two cent stamp to the Hewitt Brothers Soap Company, Dayton, Ohio, they will send you a beautiful art reproduction, all ready for framing. Some folks go to a picture store and pay a big, fat price for the same pictures. Your grocer keeps Easy Task soap; or he will keep it if you ask for it.

How He Kept the Law.

"I noticed," said the friend-who-could-be-trusted, after a trip through the factory where preserves are made, "that a white powder is first put in the cans, and that the preserves are then put in the white powder."

"Yes," explained the proprietor to the friend-who-could-be-trusted, "that white powder is a preservative. You see we are compelled to put the preserves in a preservative because an idiotic requirement of the government makes it unlawful for us to put a preservative in the preserves."

Qualified.

"How does your new book go?"

"Great! I am convinced that it is a classic."

"A classic? What convinces you of that?"

"Everybody has either seen it or heard of it, but nobody has read it."

Aromatic Effects.

"What you ought to do," said the physician, "is to take the air in an automobile or a motor boat."

"Can't I stay home and open a can of gasoline?"

Where He Came In.

"Have you ever figured in a divorce suit?"

"No; the lawyers did the figuring. I just paid the bills."

HIS WELCOME FOR PRODIGAL

Cowboy Would Have Reversed Proceedings as Recorded in the Scriptures.

Judge Ben B. Lindsey of the famous Denver juvenile court said in the course of a recent address in charity:

"Too many of us are inclined to think that, one misstep made, the boy is gone for good. Too many of us are like the cowboy.

"An itinerant preacher preached to a cowboy audience on the 'Prodigal Son.' He described the foolish prodigal's extravagance and dissipation; he described his penury and his husk-eating with the swine in the sty; he described his return, his father's loving welcome, the rejoicing, and the preparation of the fatted calf.

"The preacher in his discourse noticed a cowboy staring at him very hard. He thought he had made a convert, and addressing the cowboy personally, he said from the pulpit:

"'My dear friend, what would you have done if you had had a prodigal son returning home like that?'

"'Me!' said the cowboy, promptly and fiercely, 'I'd have shot the boy and raised the calf.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Caught Too Quick.

"I pleads guilty ter stealin' dem melons, jedge," said the prisoner, "but I wants de mercy er de court."

"On what grounds?" asked the judge.

"On dese grounds," replied the prisoner: "I stole de melons, but de sheriff didn't give me a chance to eat 'em!"—Atlanta Constitution.

She's a Free Lance.

"Would you have a pickpocket arrested if you detected one in the act of going through your pockets?"

"With one exception."

"What's that?"

"Not if it was my wife."

William Logue, of Huntley, supervisor of Gibson, who has been cleaning up the road from Sinnamahoning to Karthaus, finished the job last Saturday. The road now is cleaned of brush and logs the whole distance as Grove supervisors cleared their part last spring and Clinton county people cleared their part. The road is in good condition now all but a bridge across Wykoff Run, which no doubt will be built in the near future, as it is much needed.

John Jordan, of Huntley, while out in Karthaus last week had quite a thrilling encounter with a monster buck. It came up to the door of his tent when all was still and in the moonlight looked very fierce, as he had a large head of horns. He wanted to know if he was the John Jordan, of Huntley, the mighty bear trapper and if he was did he know one great deer hunter by the name of Dick Kilber, who had shot at him two years ago and to tell him that he was on his old stamping ground waiting for him and his 20:30 and that his bark was worse than his bite. Jordan sprang to his feet and got his ax to defend himself, but it was only a dream.

They tried it again Tuesday, returning home about 3 o'clock with two quarts of berries all told. Dan Sullivan killed a rattlesnake which he says measured 7 feet, 3¼ inches and had 29¼ rattles and was 1¼ inches in thickness. He said he would have brought it home but it was too heavy. He says he "seen" several others but they were to small to kill.

Walter Smith, W. F. Lewis and Mrs. Annie Housler were town visitors on Thursday. F. A. Lewis was also to town on Thursday and when returning killed a black rattler near the North Creek watering trough. Said snake sported ten rattles and a button.

The rattlers seem to be as numerous in these parts as elsewhere. V. M. Dow killed one in his hay field, and Clendon Moore and Norman Solveson report the death of one (by their hands) one evening last week when they were bringing their cows from pasture, up Porcupine Hollow.

A warning—It would be well for anyone going into a strange yard for a drink of water (?) to be careful or they may fall through a wire fence into a bear trap, instead of an innocent little chicken coop.

Twenty-seven of our people attended the temperance entertainment in the Rich Valley church Thursday night, some taking part in the exercises with recitations, reading and singing. A very interesting meeting is reported.

Everal Housler went to the city Monday to meet Miss Ethel, daughter of Mrs. Mae Walters who has been helping to care for her sister, Mrs. Smith, at the home of her niece, Mrs. Ethel Housler. Miss Ethel will take her mothers place while the last named lady returned home for a much needed rest. Mrs. Smith still continues to be in a critical condition. Mrs. Walter and little daughter, Loyce, returned to their home Tuesday.

Ethel Britton, Hazel Chandler, Thomas Britton, Ed. Morgan, V. M. Dow and Fred Solveson were city visitors ou Saturday.

A pocket book containing money, was found at the school house Sunday morning. It is supposed to have been lost Saturday night by some one who attended the social. The owners can have same by calling on V. M. Dow and proving property.

Miss Agnes Taylor, one of our "used to was" young ladies, but who moved to York State with her parents a year or two ago, was married in June to Rufus Frances. We extend hearty congratulations.
